COFFEE

Just what does the cup of coffee you had for breakfast do for you during the remainder of the day? Much has been said on the subject and much more will probably be said during the next century or so. A recent statement by Frederic Damrau, M. D., on the subject is of more than passing interest however. Here is what this doctor says:

"That the caffeine contained in coffee poisons the system and hurries the order for the tombstone is a firm conviction in the minds of many folk. Many teachers of high school physiology and physical trainers of would-be Jack Dempseys and Red Granges start their line of talk with the ukase 'No coffee!'"

"Just the other day, while lunching with a school teacher (he teaches physiology, too), I ordered a cup of coffee."

"Why is it that doctors never practice what they preach?" I was asked. "You know that coffee poisons the system, and still you keep on drinking it."

"My friend smokes half a dozen packs of cigarettes a day and buys his liquor from an unpermitted bootlegger; but, no siree, he thinks too much of his health to poison the system with a cup of coffee!"

"The American soldier during the World War always had to have his coffee. If he couldn't hold enough for the long march, he was allowed 'coffee money' to buy it on the road. Long experience has shown that coffee helps the soldier to bear up under the strenuous trials to which he is subjected."

"That too much coffee is harmful to anybody is an unquestioned truth. So is too much bolonka, Roquefort cheese, hot dogs or anything else. The only fair way to put the question is, 'Will the moderate use of coffee harm the average person?' And the only answer that can be given is, 'No, not so far as the doctors know.'"

"Most physicians agree that coffee should not be given to children. They are high-strung and mischievous enough without stimulating their brains to further activity. Neither should the old people drink coffee. It is only too likely to keep them awake nights and make them irritable during the daytime."

"Last week I met a business man who said that he drank milk for breakfast and coffee just before going to bed. The result was that his mind was always fresh for business when it was time to go to sleep, but he fell asleep over his desk when it was time to work."

"The effects of coffee in producing wakefulness are likely to last for several hours. Nothing is better to keep you awake during after-dinner speeches; but it may also keep you from sleeping after you get to bed. If you have any trouble at all in reaching dreamland, it is good policy to drink your coffee for breakfast and lunch, and then leave it strictly alone."

"Commonly a physician will tell his patient to drink no coffee at all. He does not mean that the roasted beans are harmful to everybody but only to that particular individual."

"If you are not a child in rompers, if you are not a granny in an armchair, if your doctor has not advised you against it—in short, if you are the average reader, you may safely make your coffee percolator useful as well as ornamental."

Now is the time to buy your thermometers. They will be higher in the summer.

Oakland Party of Young People Turn Turtle While Being Chased by Officer

Mrs. Minnie Weiner, 2316 Myrtle avenue and George De Neve, 551 Fifty-ninth street Oakland are in the Cottage hospital in a serious condition and George Kolari, 575 Fifty-ninth street the driver of the car in which they were injured when it turned turtle north of the Santa Fe crossing on San Pablo avenue late last night is being held in the city jail pending the outcome of the injuries to the two.

Three other parties riding in the car were uninjured except for slight bruises and cuts. They are Roy Kenny 475, Fifty-eighth street Oakland Sarah Weiner 2316 Myrtle avenue Oakland, a cousin of Minnie, and Ruth Weiner 2316 Myrtle avenue, Oakland a sister of Sarah.

Minnie Weiner is suffering from a broken right leg, a possible fractured skull and severe cuts about the body and head.

De Neve is suffering from a possible fractured skull and severe bruises and injuries about the body.

According to Ruth Weiner the party had been stopped by a traffic officer and arrested for speeding a short time before the accident. She stated that after the arrest the car proceeded slowly and that when they crossed the Santa Fe crossing on San Pablo avenue near Macdonald avenue a front tire blew out turning over the automobile. The car, a light touring model turned over three times.

A different version of the story was given by the police however, who after an investigation by Inspector L. E. Jones placed Kolari in the city jail on a reckless driving charge pending the outcome of the injuries of the two occupants of the machine.

According to the police report the party had been stopped by Traffic Officer Frank Davis of Albany and that Traffic Officer Eddie Baker of this city came upon the party while Davis was making the arrest.

Immediately after being released by Davis the car is reported to have careened along San Pablo avenue at break neck speed. Baker who followed the car according to the report lost track of the car in the traffic at Stege junction and when he got free of the traffic he found the overturned car beyond the railroad crossing.

J. H. Polly 1237 Willow street Martinez was the first to arrive on the scene and assisted by F. A. Tittmore, 468, Carlston street, Richmond and Charles Renwick, 201 Nevin avenue brought the injured parties to the Abbott Emergency hospital where they were given emergency treatment by Dr. St. John Healy and then taken to the Cottage hospital.

According to members of the party they had attended a theater in Oakland and were taking a drive out San Pablo avenue to buy a sandwich and then planned to return to their homes when the accident occurred.

TO BUILD PLANT
ON THE HARBOR

Construction will start immediately on buildings to house the Richmond headquarters of the Duncan-Harrelson general construction company, according to an announcement made yesterday by O. H. Harrelson. Improvements which consist of warehouses and shipways are included in the plans, the cost of which will amount to approximately $75,000.

All of the equipment formerly stored at the Oakland plant which has been abandoned, has been shipped to Richmond.

A permit was secured from the city building inspector yesterday to remove and remodel the former Lauritzen house on Cutting boulevard to another location to make room for the proposed improvements.

The Duncan-Harrelson company handles general construction work the most recent of which was the Antioch-Sherman Island Bridge, supervised personally by Harrelson. Business has been transacted in a small measure at the inner harbor location of the company adjoining the Richmond Navigation company's holdings on Cutting boulevard. The new plant will contain shops for the repairing of the company's equipment.

PENSION BILL FOR MOTHERS
BECOMES LAW

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, June 17.—Congress today passed the Mothers' Pension Bill for the district of Columbia, removing the stigma of charity and providing that mothers' aid for care of dependent children shall be provided them through a separate division of the district office of public welfare.

Its aim is to enable the dependent children to be cared for in homes, rather than in public institutions. It also seeks to enable the mothers to obtain the aid without applying like mendicants to the old charity institutions.

The plan finally adopted is a compromise between the desire of Sophie Irene Loeb, Margaret Woodrow Wilson and other social workers to have the mothers aid administered by a few, independent board and the desire of Washingtonians to have it administered like all charity funds by the entire Board of Public Welfare.

The bill now awaits only the signature of President Coolidge.

ON WAY HOME

(By GORINNE RICH)
(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, June 17.—Filled with satisfaction over what she has accomplished in her first session of Congress, Mrs. Florence P. Kahn, the "Lady from California" left for home today to spend a summer vacation? Oh, my, no!

"I want to be 'renominated' and I have six opponents, enough said!" She declared before leaving. Mrs. Kahn went on the train that bore the body of her late Congressional Colleague, Representative Lawrence J. Flaherty, to San Francisco.

She has done a great deal of work during the seven months Congress has been in session and she feels that the time has been profitably spent.

"Not one day was I missing from my desk," she said, "and only one daytime invitation did I accept, although, naturally a congresswoman receives many invitations to social affairs. But I felt that I had a man's job and I wanted to fill it in a man's way. By attending to business."

Perhaps the outstanding thing that pleases Mrs. Kahn is her having had a part in "arousing" (Continued on Page 2)

Thousands Cheer Papal Legates
On Arrival in Chicago to Attend
Great Eucharistic Congress There

(By Universal Service)
BY MARY SYNON
(Copyright, 1926, Universal Service)
CHICAGO, June 17.—The soul of a great people met today the soul of a great church when Chicago, surging, shouting, pushing, shoving, praying, kneeling, rioting in a welcome, which transcended anything of the kind ever seen in any American celebration, lifted welcome to the papal legate, John, Cardinal Bonzano, archbishop of Mitylene, and the eight cardinals of the Catholic church who came westward with him in pilgrimage to the Twenty-eighth Eucharistic congress.

With hundreds of thousands of people of every race and creed breaking through police lines at every step over Michigan boulevard from the Park Row station, to the Cathedral of the Holy Name, Cardinal Bonzano, riding with his eminence George, Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago and host to the visiting princes of the church looked upon the most amazing demonstration that any man of this generation has ever seen.

Before its size and spirit other historic gatherings, of our cycle; the wild greeting the same street saw for Theodore Roosevelt when, in 1912, he walked out of the Coliseum to lead a new era in American politics in a meeting in New York City; the burial of the unknown soldier at Arlington; all fade into the grayness of comparative smallness.

Mobs, fighting their way to the open car where Cardinal Bonzano sat with Cardinal Mundelein in the impassivity of a philosophy which discounts the glory of the present in the tradition of the past and the building of the future, made the day (Continued on page 5)

FORMER KAISER
GIVES VIEWS ON CONFISCATION

Ex-Ruler of Germany Does Not Believe That Confiscation of Property is Just

(By Universal Service)
DOORN, HOLLAND, June 17.—I have just spent a week as the guest of the former German Kaiser at his home in Doorn, engaging in tranquil historical and philosophical discussions. In contrast with the quiet life here Berlin seems like a political wren's cauldron.

The former Kaiser goes calmly about his daily tasks and studies in spite of the coming plebiscite in Germany Sunday, which might lead to the confiscation of his fortune. He faces this peril with a quiet dignity.

On the strength of statements made to me by the Kaiser I am able to state, however, that he is moved deeply by the spectacle of how a noisy minority of agitators pretending to battle against the princess, is undermining the credit of the fatherland at home and abroad. The Emperor sees in this attempt a menace to the state which alarms him far more (Continued on Page 2)

WHEELER IS ORDERED TO PRODUCE DATA

Entire History of League Since The Advent of Prohibition Is Demanded

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, June 17.—Sitting across the great mahogany table from him and pointing an accusatory finger, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri today ordered Wayne B. Wheeler to produce to the Senate Slush Fund committee all the private financial accounts of the Anti-Saloon League in order that the American public may at last know the financial agents of the vast dry propaganda and political activities of the past six years.

There, before a tense audience that jammed the committee-room and hung upon every word that fell from the lips of the two foremost champions of the wet and dry causes, was laid the basis for the first public peer into the public and private history of the league.

Wheeler, on the witness stand for the two hours during the morning session, was forced by Reed's relentless examination to reveal his own sources of income and some of the major activities of the organization which wields such tremendous power in official life.

Wheeler admitted to Reed that the only source of substantial income during his league time had been from the league. Yet, as general counsel and legislative superintendent, his annual salary is but $6,000 a year, Wheeler said.

He estimated that the league last year collected for its purposes between $150,000 and $200,000.

He admitted that the league takes an aggressive part in politics, supplying its members with records of congressmen, and opposes wets and help dries to win elections.

He admitted that the league, in perhaps forty of fifty cases, has "interceded" with federal prosecuting officers in behalf of prohibition sleuths accused of crime. But he insisted that in every such case, the league acted only to secure "a fair trial" for conscientious officers who were being "framed" by bootlegging interests. He stubbornly insisted that the league never has and never will "interfere with justice" in these or any other cases.

Wheeler also declared, under Reed's examination, that the league makes reports against prohibition officers who are regarded as being unfit for their offices.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Waite, 449 Fifteenth street will leave tomorrow for a visit in the state of Washington.

A CHANGE IN EUROPE

According to Frank H. Simmonds, noted American writer on international affairs, who has just returned from Europe, there is a noticeable change in attitude on the part of certain European nations as to the advisability from the European standpoint of Uncle Sam's joining the League of Nations or getting any farther into European affairs.

The diplomats coming to this conclusion are of course, looking at it from their own interests. They have been somewhere jolted by the fact that we have insisted on the payment of the war debts and doubtless feel that there is no use in our coming into European affairs if we refuse to play Santa Clause to the nations across the water. Indeed they can perhaps see that our presence there might in some way be a handicap to political designs which they may have in the future.

No, if it is getting to be advisable from the European viewpoint that the United States stay out of Europe, it is all the more advisable that we stay out from an American standpoint. It is doubtless true that nothing is to be gained either for Europe or America by obligating America in some sort of a world super-government. Much more can be done for the peace and good will of all the nations of the world by leaving Europe to regulate European affairs while America takes care of the problems of the Western Hemisphere. The scheme worked admirably for more than a hundred years and when circumstances made America's participation in a European war necessary, our lack of political commitments did not prevent our doing our duty. Indeed, the absence of political commitments between Europe and America is much more apt to lead to peace and harmony than positive agreements which might easily lead to disputes that might be otherwise avoided.

The policy of no political commitments was advocated by every early American statesman in our country. The honor roll in this regard contains the names of Washington, Adams, Madison, Monroe and Jefferson. Indeed, it was Thomas Jefferson who wrote, in the time when the Monroe Doctrine was up for discussion, that it would be a good thing, in his opinion, if a line could be drawn through the middle of the Atlantic, with America on one side attending to its own business and Europe on the other side doing the same thing.

It may be argued now that the affairs of nations have become so interlocking that much isolation is no longer possible. But it cannot be argued from this that political commitments, open to question and debate whatever troubles arises, are to be preferred to an independent course of action which would preserve alike the rights of both Europe and America.

In closing it might be remarked that it is a sort of grim joke that the early patriot who is most admired by those of internationalist tendencies is none other than Thomas Jefferson, who would have disagreed with them entirely in their view of our international duties.

PLANNING PRETTY CURTAINS FOR THE NEW SEASON'S BRIDE

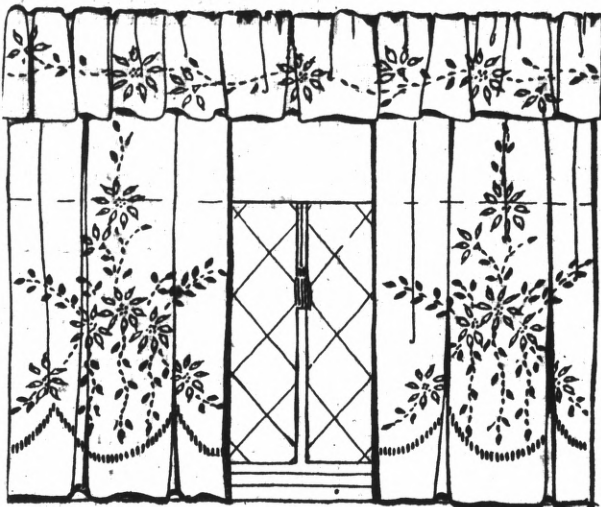

The Traditional "Something Blue" that Brings Happiness
May Be in Dainty Embroidery Stitches

By MONA MULLEN

WHEN a bride is making plans for her wedding, the adage is that she must have something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue.

Since curtains must be a part of her household furnishings, no matter how small and dainty the apartment, nothing could be prettier than blue embroidery on a background of scrim, white muslin or dimity, using the motifs illustrated on the curtains pictured.

The transfer supplies motifs for two pairs of curtains and a valance for one. If preferred the valance may be omitted and the embroidery provided for it transferred to a pretty scarf for the dresser or one of the pieces of furniture in the dining-room set. The border of the valance consists of delicate sprays of leaves and vines, interrupted here and there with a large flower that is worked in lazy-daisy stitch.

The curtains may be used in the kitchen, bathroom, bedroom or pantry and, of course, the materials and method of development would be selected according to the use to which they would be put. The housewife who is already established and who is making plans for replenishing her appointments could find nothing daintier than the design pictured for the decoration of curtains.

Besides blue the embroidery could be done in an effective grouping of pastel colors. Rose, blue, yellow, lavender and pink are pretty shades to use for the flowers, with varying shades of green for the leaves. French knots could be used for the centers of the flowers. The entire design is exceedingly simple and works up quickly. The edges could be hemmed or trimmed with lace.

HAMMOND IS FURNISHING NEW HOTEL

Charles B. Hamilton, president of the Hamilton chain of hotels of which the new Carquinez hotel will be a part, is in Richmond supervising the furnishing of the hotel and speaks with praise of the construction and plan of the building. He stated yesterday that the Carquinez hotel is one of the most conveniently arranged and one of the most attractive of the new hotels in the chain.

A number of Richmond business men have already secured rooms and suites and plan to make the hotel their residence after the opening in July. Hamilton stated that there was no doubt in his mind that the hotel would fill rapidly.

The hotel will be managed by James E. Hamilton, brother of the president, and James E. Strong will be assistant manager. Strong has arrived in Richmond and is preparing to assume his duties.

Other hotels in the Hamilton chain include the Hotel Fresno, Hotel Marysville, Hotel Reynolds, at Riverside, Hotel Tracy at Tracy, Hotel Alameda at Alameda and the Hotel Flagstaff at Flagstaff, Arizona and the associated hotels Occidental and Occidental Annex at Santa Rosa. Advertising of the Hotel Carquinez is being carried out at each of these hotels and by the Peck-Judah travel offices throughout the state. This is expected to bring many transient guests to the new hotel here.

Former Kaiser Gives Views on Confiscation

than the possibility of personal loss.

He considers the inviolability of private property one of the pillars upon which our civilization rests. It seems regrettable to the Emperor that at the moment when Germany is asking America to recognize the sanctity of private property by returning the German enemy property seized during the war, the very principle is placed in jeopardy by a Bolshevik measure designed to confiscate the property of one group of German citizens.

The very fact that such a measure is seriously debated is likely, the Emperor fears, to undermine the credit of the German people, for if the property of one group may be seized today, the Emperor holds that another group will face the same peril tomorrow. Today the attack upon property involves the former reigning family; tomorrow it may be directed against the church, or against the great corporations, or against the farmers or landlords.

The Emperor believes that if private property legitimately accumulated by the wise economy of generations of rulers is unsafe, then the savings of no citizen, no corporation, no church, no investor either foreign or native, is immune from seizure.

Theft, he holds, remains theft, and robbery remains robbery. The status of the victim does not change the offense. The man who steals a gold watch is a thief, even if the victim happens to be a prince. The sanctity of private property in Prussia was well defined when the poor miller in San Souci defied the desire of Frederick the Great for his land with the words: "Your Majesty, there are still judges in Berlin."

The Hohenzollerns, the Kaiser holds, ask no more in respect to their private property than Frederick the Great, absolute monarch, was willing to grant the humblest of his subjects. There can be no one law for Prince and Pauper in this respect. No nation can assault private property without shaking to the very foundation the delicate structure of credit, and no nation needs Germany to repair her shattered property and gain her markets.

On the moral and sentimental aspect of the question the Kaiser is too deeply touched to trust himself to speak at all.

The above statement expressly authorized by the former Kaiser constitute his first and only expression on the confiscation movement from Doorn.

public sentiment" for a re-appointment of representatives. She did it through her maiden speech on the floor, which brought her an avalanche of commendatory letters.

"I am proud, too, of my work for the Army and Navy Nurses' Retirement Bill, in which I was much interested," she said. "And I believe that I have achieved something toward improving the harbor of San Francisco."

Besides that, Mrs. Kahn tells of numerous old soldiers' pensions she helped obtain for her constituents and hundreds of other such duties. She explained:

"I get 50 or 60 letters a day, mostly asking me to do things for somebody. A lot of them come from women who live out of my state. They seem to feel that they can call on a woman congressman with less reserve than they can on their own representatives. "Many of these letters are really heart-breaking and I attend to them immediately. No long ago one came from a young girl whose father, her only pal," she said, had been imprisoned for some connection with narcotics. She did not understand quite why. In managing to get him paroled, I feel that I have done a humanitarian thing."

"Another letter was written by a woman whose son had been court-martialed and sent to prison. It was most appealing. I looked into the case for her and found that the boy could be freed."

"It is such matters as these that keep a congresswoman busy and give her the impression that she is useful. Yes, I want to come back to Congress."

Margaret Davis Named Queen for Apricot Festival

Margaret Davis, daughter of Roy Davis has been selected queen of the Antioch Apricot Festival to be held in Diablo valley today, Saturday and Sunday, which this year will assume special significance on account of the event marking the dedication of the Antioch-Sherman Island bridge.

The selection of Miss Davis as queen followed the arrival in San Francisco of ten of the queens of the various towns in the Delta regions.

Miss Dolly Colclough, of Richmond is an attendant to the queen.

The official opening of the bridge took place last evening when a signal fire was lighted on top of Mt. Diablo and answered by a similar signal on Half Dome, Yosemite Valley.

The festival will run for three days and the program arranged for today includes the coronation of the queen and the official dedication of the giant bridge which opens a ferryless route to Sacramento from the Eastbay.

The bridge has been officially named the Victory bridge and it forms an important part of the Victory highway.

BROKEN HEARTS of HOLLYWOOD with Louise Dresser in a Warner picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Betsy Terwilliger and Hal Chatter, in Hollywood as prize winners of newspaper contests for movie tryouts, are depressed by the number of people seeking work. Old timers see a mysterious resemblance in Betsy to someone they cannot remember. Betsy meets Virginia Perry, erstwhile star, now a failure. Hal flops dismally as a cowboy; and Betsy fails as a bathing girl. That evening Marshall, reputed to be responsible for many of the "broken hearts of Hollywood," takes Betsy for an auto ride, arousing Hal's jealous anger.

CHAPTER IX.

There was no noticeable trace of coolness in Hal's manner the next morning when he met Betsy at the breakfast table that she whispered impulsively, almost tearfully.

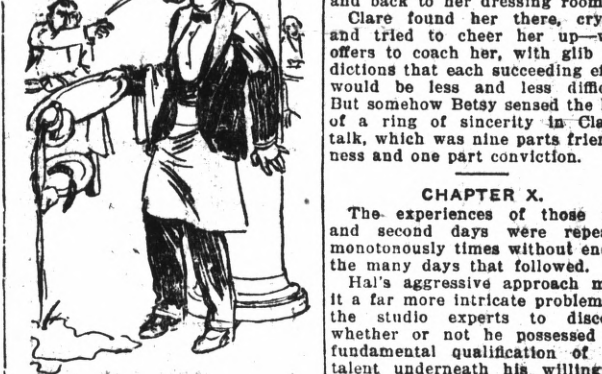

"Why, Hal, what's wrong? You're a foolish boy to act as you do toward Mr. Marshall."

"He's no good, Betsy," blurted Hal in his honest, straightforward way. "I've been told so, and I can see it for myself."

Alas for Hal! His tactics were not the kind that are successful with women, who to be guided in the right direction must be driven in the wrong. Now she pouted.

"Gosh! He acted like a perfect gentleman every minute, and gave me lots of valuable suggestions. We didn't stay out an hour all told after leaving you. Just drove around a bit, and came right home, but you were locked in your room, and I didn't want to interrupt your writing."

Hal felt a twinge of contrition. "Oh, I guess it's all right, Betsy, if you think so. But I've heard and read so much about the going-on of these movie people that I think a nice girl like you has to be on her guard every minute. It's different for a man like me—" Betsy flashed her eyes at him humorously, grateful for the relief in the tension.

"Oh, don't be so sure of your virtue, young sir. If Alma Lubens or some other of these movie vamps get to know you, I'll have a fine light on my hands to hold your errand—your friendship—for poor little me."

They both laughed at the preposterous thought that any such thing could ever come between them; and in a playful clasp of hands renewed and sealed their tender devotion. So thereafter they were on a bus, bound for the Amalgamated Lot and their second day of adventure.

Whatever the inherent efficacy of the advice Marshall had given Betsy, and however deep and moving the resolve of Hal to do better and make good for Betsy's sake, when confronted with the bald realities of another day's trials they fared no better than on the first.

Hal, cast toward noon in a comedy to replace a "bit" man taken ill, proved wooden in his reaction to custard pies hurled in his face by an irate customer of the restaurant in a scene in which he played a waiter. The director, after a patient hour of coaching and the using up of all the available custard pies, decided to call it a day and await the securing, on the morrow, of an experienced super.

Betsy, stumbling stuffily through a scene as maid to a star, had the searing humiliation of hearing herself called "pretty but dumb," when in truth she was but frightened.

Here, too, directorial patience could not discount inexperience, lack of genuine pantomime talent, and the painful self-consciousness of one not born with the ego that must needs be a part of the mental equipment of every actor and actress.

The director surrendered to the obvious after a while, but something was about the earnestness of this efflike little beauty restrained the usual directorial cascade of withering adjectives; he called Betsy to him and dismissed her as quietly and kindly as it is possible to do such a thing on a set crammed with gaping, knowing people.

"I'm afraid you're hopeless," he declared, which, in Hollywoodese, was gentle enough.

"Oh, dear," sobbed Betsy, unstrung and shaking. "I've tried so hard, and I do so mean to make good."

"My dear girl, ambition and sincerity are but two minor qualities of the many that go to make for moving picture success. It's just the same in other lines of work. A stenographer might be very ambitious and work long and hard, but unless she has talent, and a personality endowed by Nature with peculiar fitness for that particular thing, she will never become secretary to the president of the company. And no salesgirl, however ambitious, will become buyer without talent, plus long hard apprenticeship. In the movies the appearances of talent are more evident and direct, the reactions quicker, so that apprenticeships here don't have to be so long—provided one has the essential, intangible something required."

He knew something of Betsy's history, having been apprised by Cameron that she was a contest winner; so when he saw the tears of bitter disappointment scalding her eyes, he grew soft-hearted and said kindly, despite his better judgment:

"Of course, I'm not passing final word on you, little girl. It's perhaps too early to tell in your case. But, in this picture, I haven't any more time to spend coaching. Lord, the office is after me now on account of overhead. I've lost so much time. From now on I've got to have people who are trained—on whom I can grind without wasting much time rehearsing. I'm sorry, Miss."

There was nothing left for Betsy to do but walk the path of humiliation before all the staring, grinning, whispering crowd, of the set and back to her dressing room. Clare found her there, crying, and tried to cheer her up—with offers to coach her, with glib professions that each succeeding effort would be less and less difficult. But somehow Betsy sensed the lack of a ring of sincerity in Clare's talk, which was nine parts friendliness and one part conviction.

CHAPTER X.

The experiences of those first and second days were repeated monotonously times without end in the many days that followed.

Hal's aggressive approach made it a far more intricate problem for the studio experts to discover whether or not he possessed the fundamental qualifications of a real talent underneath his willingness to work hard, his good-natured earnestness, his exceeding ambition. Bit by bit he began to acquire a certain skill in the sort of little things into which he was cast: soldier, college boy, gangster, all the exaggerated gamut of types that is played on the cinema emotional scales. Hal was good-looking and could wear clothes passably well; and the work for male extras on the average, in the studio lots is less personalized, less positive, than that for female supers.

But never again did any director cast Hal in a part which required the riding of a horse!

Betsy, lacking Hal's ready affability, was too shy by far to intrude or project herself with confidence into the work. Her primary experiences had left an indelible mark upon her attitude; in brief, she had developed a persistent case of stage fright, or "camera consciousness." More than once she rehearsed a part coming tentatively enough to arouse faint hope in the director. But the instant she heard the assistant call "Lights!" and the great blue flood of brilliance from the Klieg lights gave her the sensation of being apart and magnified on an island of limelight, she grew nervous.

The yell "Camera!" and the immediate whirling sound of the inexorably grinding black box, which she knew was recording with savage prominence every slightest expression, every slightest gesture, caused hope as air from a lighting struck balloon. That "grind...grind...grind...grind" like a sputter from the lips of a monstrous god, was the saw that pricked her bubble of increasing confidence. Clare told her that many oldtimers often suffered from this camera consciousness.

So it went; Hal's star and stock remaining on an indifferent level, and Betsy's steadily declining. However, as the days passed and her circle of acquaintances widened, more and more people remarked upon her mysterious resemblance to someone whose name they always had "on the tip of their tongues"—but couldn't quite place.

Tom and His Pal

TOM MIX and his little pal VIRGINIA MARSHALL in a scene from "My Own Pal" which comes to the screen of the California for two days starting today.

TOM MIX IS AT RICHMOND IN WESTERN FILM

Few stories have been written around Tom Mix, super-star of the screen which provide as capable a vehicle for the talented and gifted artist as "A Child of the Prairie," which opens a two day engagement at the Richmond Theatre today. In action, suspense in the cumulative episodes dealing with love, hate and revenge rise to a pitch from which the audience is seldom dissuaded.

How Tom rescues his child from death in a thrilling pursuit; how he tracks down "Slippery Jim"; how he learns the fate of his wife who met death in the path of degradation to which her abductor dragged her; how he learns the truth of his daughter's existence is all told with a tear and a smile, with pathos and thrills, with comedy and drama in this absorbing melodrama "A Child of the Prairie."

Other features on the same program include "Raisin' Cain," a Big Boy comedy; and "Congress of Celebrities," a screen novelty.

High School Plans To Be Finished Soon

Plans for the proposed Richmond Union high school will be completed by next Wednesday, according to word received from Oakland yesterday by Superintendent of Schools W. T. Helms, who stated that a special meeting of the trustees will be probably called for next Wednesday night to consider the completed plans.

Bids for construction of the work will be called for immediately, if Architect Lewis Stone's plans are accepted by the trustees so that actual construction can be started as soon as possible. It is planned to have the new building completed in time for the coming of the fall term in 1928. Superintendent Helms stated that work on both the Harding and Fairmount schools is progressing and that they will both be completed in time for the opening of the school term this fall.

"MY OWN PAL" IS ATTRACTION AT CALIFORNIA

Tom Mix, star of the Fox Films production "My Own Pal" has ample opportunity to display his daring horsemanship and his skill with the rope in this altogether different western. This thrilling film comes to the California Theatre today for a two day's run.

In it, he is Tom O'Hara who comes to the city in search of thrills and joins the mounted police. In this character Tom puts Tony his horse through all his tricks for the benefit of his fellow police officers and shows how handy a rope can come in when crooks are to be apprehended and tied fast until further notice.

But he does not use his rope exclusively for the capture of thieves—he gains his way into the force because he has saved the niece of the chief being injured in a runaway accident.

Vivacious Little Olive Borden was selected to play opposite Mix in this production. Little Virginia Marshall is cast as his pal Jill. Others in the cast are Tom Santschi, Tom McGuire, Bardson Bard, Jacques Rollens and Helen Lynch. J. G. Bystone directed the production.

Other features on the same program include "Rah Rah Heidelberg," an Earle Foxe comedy; "Dixie," a Ko Ko Song car-tune; "International News"; and Larry Canelo at the organ.

TO CLEAN UP FISHING SITE

For many years the bay just off the Alcum refinery of the Union Oil company has been the favorite fishing grounds of bay fishermen who hunt the elusive striped bass. But because of the dumping of oil into the waters the fish caught at that point are unfit to eat because of an oily taste. Now this condition will be remedied. A. G. Page, manager of the California refinery assured the California Fish and Game Association that the asphaltum dump along the shore line will be covered with rocks, and the pollution of water with oil from the skid tanks will stop immediately.

Rocks will be hauled immediately to cover the unsightly dump and new machines will be installed to remove the sulphuric acid from the waters flushed into San Pablo bay.

Thousands Cheer Papal Legates. On Arrival in Chicago to Attend Great Eucharistic Congress There not merely a great spectacle, but also a great event.

Not since those times when great crowds of Europe surged over old roads to the ports of the crusades have so many hundreds of thousands of humankind gathered for a religious demonstration, not even in Mitylene, where Paul preached, nor in Toledo, founded by another apostle; not even in Rouen, most mediaeval of all the towns of Europe, nor in Rome itself, cities all of them represented in the coming of their prelates to the congress, have more men and women thrilled to the passing of wearers of the red robe.

Gazing out today on the multitude, Cardinal Bonzano saw not only the children of old races but also the children of a new one which is the merging of them all.

More Poles than in Warsaw, more Germans than in Munich, more Hungarians than in Budapest, more Italians than in Naples, more Irish than in Dublin, more French than in Rennes, more Bohemians than in Prague shouldered each other on the wide avenue.

From every state in the Union merged in their Americanism, stood men and women, some children of the faith in which the presence of Christ in the Eucharist is the basic belief, others alien to it, but conscious of the deep significance of the occasion.

Indians, Negroes, Chinese made mottled spots of darker color among the white races in the throng. In no other American city, not even in New York, with all its varied peoples, has come so heterogeneous a multitude as that which stood today under the jagged skyline of the boulevard. It was a human mass in essence, spectacle-loving, clamorous, individualistic, little-strung, good-humored, a little cynical, but deeply conscious of the passing by of a great force.

To half the crowd the pomp and ceremony of the gay robing of the cardinals and their attendants meant nothing more than the brilliancy of any pageant. The other half, children of the Catholic church, bowed before the crimson that means to them the willingness of their wearer to shed his blood for the Christ of Calvary. All of them however lifted hats or bent heads before the aspect of the two men in the open car, serene in power, calm in acceptance of riotous greeting because they saw themselves as symbols of their religion, destined to rise or fall with it as the will of the peoples of the world decrees.

Inch by inch, through block after block, past the library, over the bridge with its tablet to Marquette, the black-robed who founded the site of Chicago, the procession, broken out of all semblance to order, shrouded through the clamorous lines. Faces of every type, gazed upward, faces of timid little nuns, of shabby priests, of gunmen, of bootleggers, of clerks, of stenographers, of millionaires, of the thousand and one kinds of men and women who make the warp and woof of a city. Breathless children staped Women lifted babes in arms. Then as the cars passed, the crowd fell in behind them, rushing pell-mell after them toward the tall-steeped, white Cathedral of the Holy Name.

There, to the strains of "Ecce Sacerdos"—they beheld the priest of the Gregorian ritual—the two cardinals moved up the aisle between purple-covered pews to the white altar.

It was a scene of splendor upon which they came, a stage set for the reenactment of a drama as old as the time of Constantine, the bowing of the pomp of the world before the white radiance of the Lord of the Host.

From tall gray marble pillars hung festoons of golden leaves. High on the arches gleamed the shields of the papacy. Up in the Gothic nave floated hundreds of flags, flags symbolic of the congress, bearing in yellow on a white ground representations of the chalice and the ostensorium, flags of the papacy, the crown of Lombardy and the keys of Peter; American flags intertwined with them all. Banners from China, exquisitely embroidered, showing the humble Saint Anthony with the child Jesus in his arms, hung with green pennons above the side altars.

Above the high altar, dominating the great edifice, shone a replica of the ostensorium, that vessel which holds the Sacred Host, the heart of the Eucharistic belief of the Catholic church. Incandescent, glowing, it blazed above the golden flame of thousands of candles, above the sweetness of thousands of white flowers, peonies, lilies, daisies of the field.

And below, near the communion rail, burned in brass stands other thousands of the little candles of the poor, lighted long hours before for some special intention of some humble pilgrim.

To the right of the altar rose the long red and gold throne which awaits the cardinals: Alexis Cardinal Charost, archbishop of Rennes, and primate of Brittany; Louis Ernest, Cardinal Dubois, archbishop of Paris, and primate of France; Michael, Cardinal Von Faulhaber, archbishop of Munich and primate of Bavaria; John, Cardinal Czernoch, archbishop of Strigonia, and primate of Hungary; Gustave Frederick, Cardinal Piffi, archbishop of Vienna, and primate of Austria; Don Enrique Cardinal Reig Y Casanova, archbishop of Toledo, and primate of Spain; Patrick Cardinal O'Donnell, archbishop of Armagh, and primate of all Ireland; Patrick, Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York; who came on the special train with Cardinal Bonzano; and Dennis, Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of Philadelphia, and William, Cardinal O'Donnell, archbishop of Boston, who will arrive later in the week.

To the left stood the throne of Cardinal Mundelein, reserved for the papal legate during the congress by virtue of his rank as Ambassador of His Holiness Pope Pius XI. Red and gold, velvet and bullion, with high-backed red chair, it waited the legate's coming as he strode up the aisle after the little procession of cross-bearer and candle-bearers, all in white and red, laces and satins.

Four priests bore over him a canopy of white and blue and gold, stepping aside as he went up the step of the sanctuary. Cardinal Mundelein, preceding him, drew to one side. His immediate attendants, Monsignor M. F. Fitzsimmons and F. A. Purcell, the Right Reverend Carlo Respighi, who had come with him from Rome, and the Reverend Thomas Tierney, took their places behind him as the legate walked to the worn white steps of the altar.

Magnificent in his flowing cape of that most gorgeous crimson of the Sacred College, beautiful as one of the pictures of Saint Francis that the old painters of Italy loved to limn, John, Cardinal Bonzano stood as the choir chanted their welcome.

Then, with the same humble reverence that some little priest in a prairie mission might reveal in his devotion, he sank to his knees before the God of the Eucharist. For moments that seemed long as archbishops, bishops, priests and laymen bent forward in unison with him, he remained there, then rose and walked to his throne while Cardinal Mundelein mounted the pulpit and made to him the city's address of greeting.

With it ended the first ceremony of the Eucharistic congress. The recessional swung back through the aisle, and the crowd in the church faced outward to the waiting crowd on the sidewalks. Knights of Malta, Knights of St. Gregory, chamberlains of the papal household, the Commander of the Garde Noble, priests in surplices, jostled each other down the aisles. Once more the cardinals met the mobs of the streets, thinned now, in search of the other cardinals who had upon their arrival driven directly to the Drake Hotel.

Afterward, for long hours of the afternoon while the sun came out from back of the massed gray clouds of the morning, groups of people stood around the residence of Cardinal Mundelein, waiting for a glimpse of Cardinal Bonzano, who is his guests; around the home of Edward I. Cudahy, at 1501 N. State street, watching for the French cardinals and their party; and around the Drake, where the other cardinals are quartered.

Old nuns, little children, fellow-countrymen of the prelates, went to catch sight of them. Everywhere ran recollections of this glimpse or that of the churchmen.

"He bowed when he passed."
"I kissed his ring."
"Did you see him smile?"
"Isn't he handsome?"
"What kind of a cross did he have on?"

"What are the ones who wear purple? Archbishops?"
"Who were the men with the swords?"

"Which is O'Donnell?"
It was a day for remembrance, a day of thrills to some, of deep happiness to others, a day of portent of the possible beginning of a crusade in the fortress of the church which has sent some of its greatest men overseas to a land new in her long history.

It was the day when men from some of the oldest sees in Christendom lifted their hands in blessing over the children of the greatest new city, the day when the Ambassador of the Vicar of Rome looked out upon the welcome of Chicago; when men who wear the amethyst and topaz and emerald of cities that were old when Columbus was young saw the wonder and glory of a city that is just beginning to know her power.

It was a day not for passing chronicle, but for the scroll of history; for there on the gray, cloud-shadowed stretch of Michigan avenue the old mission spirit of the greatest Saints of the Catholic church, men who bore the cross to China and the Indies, who took it to the Ojibways and the Iroquois, Blackfeet and Sioux, circled back to meet the significance of pomp and pageantry; and nearly a million people, Americans all, regardless of their creed or race, paused in the rush of their lives as the cross went by.

BARREL HOUSE DEFEATS REFINERY IN S. O. LEAGUE

LEFTY GOTHMAN PITCHES GOOD BRAND OF BALL

Jack Snavely of Refinery Slams One Over Left Field Fence in Third Inning

What will modern science accomplish next? We have the radio, the movie, (still in its infancy) the aeroplane and still the latest miracle, is the fact that the Barrel House won a game. Yes, sir, actually defeated the Refinery 7 to 2 last night in a hit and run squabble.

Rod Allen, manager of the team came over to the press box and told those who had assembled to see the national pastime that his charges were going to win the game. He was given the horse laugh.

But the Barrel House started out to win, of course we had a hunch right along that they were trying to win and when the game ended our hunch was justified.

The Refinery was lead off team and they sent three men to the plate and then went to the field giving the Barrel House a chance. From the first inning on the Barrel House looked like the real team of old. Not only did they hit Frank Wolfman, but they salmimed him right and left.

The first inning they got three runs and three hits.

Second inning nothing doing for both teams.

Third inning the Refinery looked as if it was going after the score.

Jack Snavely, leading hitter in the league took one of Cothran's offerings and sent it for a buggy ride over the left field fence onto the Mexican shacks.

Lefty Cothran promptly blew his nose and tightened his belt. Peppin, next man up took another of Lefty's speed balls and almost knocked a board out of the right field fence for a double. Now it looked as if the Refinery would take the old ball game.

But McCoy slammed to Schimpff. Now the Barrel House was mad so they gathered in two runs, using Wolfman's slow ball, the only kind he threw for the old game with one of two exceptions, and gathered two runs and three hits.

But why go into details? Sufficient to say that Lefty Cothran did himself proud and he had 'em all crossed up. His support was wonderful.

Fitzgerald, formerly the man with the big club was missing last night. Fitz has gone to give Wetzell a chance and Wetzell took it last night.

The only thing Frank Wolfman had on the ball was the cover and the Barrel House promptly knocked that off.

Well now, since the Refinery went down the line, the Mechanics have a safe lead to take the pennant.

RALPH SMITH AND ZIEGLER MEET TONIGHT

Johnny Zeigler, Tim McCrath's tough and hard hitting heavy-weight and Ralph Smith, Pacific coast heavy-weight champion, are fit and ready for their 12 round encounter tonight at Winters Pavilion, here.

Zeigler is a real Battling Nelson sort of fighter and while it is nearly a certainty that Smith cannot stop him in the long 12 round bout, it is not exactly sure that Zeigler will not hang one on Smith's chin and thereby capture the Coast heavy-weight title. This bout is the highest class one offered to Bay region fans this week, and it even eclipses the Oakland Auditorium main event last Wednesday night.

A large crowd of Oakland boxing fans are expected to come here to witness this bout.

Jimmy West of Oakland vs. Bud Josephs of Los Angeles, 145 pounds, 66 rounds. Young Pancho Villa vs. Bobby Mars of Manila, 105 pounds. Johnny Woods of Berkeley vs. Bud Korn of Richmond, 147 pounds. Kid Shadow of Wats Tract vs. Young Mike Gibbons of Oakland, 139 pounds.

SEALS WIN

The fans, hearing the good news yesterday morning that the Seals had defeated the Sacramento team by a score of 10 to 2 could hardly believe their ears. So they cast around for some reason for this victory and they found that the said Seals had taken on a terrible grinch because of a hum decision by one of the umpires. Now that settles their question of winning a ball game, all they have to do is get mad.

Labor Notes

The Contra Costa Central Labor Council met Wednesday night at the Labor Temple 331 Macdonald avenue and transacted the following business:

Meeting called to order by Brother Willis.

Minutes of previous meeting approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS
Credentials for W. Wilson, as delegate for the Ferryboatmen's Union, received, but as the brother was unable to be present he was not obligated.

From John Thorpe, vice-president of the International Association of Machinists, stating that at this time it will be impossible for the International to place an organizer at the disposal. The cooperation of the Oakland Business Agents is promised.

From the Union Labor Life Insurance company, asking that we subscribe for the allotted number of shares set aside for this organization. Filed.

From the Union Label Trades Dept., setting forth reasons why Organized Labor should demand union label goods. "We must coordinate our 'purchasing power'. If we insist on union wages, we must spend these wages so as to employ only union workers. Every time we buy an article or spend money we give employment to someone, so why not be a fair employer and employ only union workers?"

Capita tax for months of May and June received from Butchers.

REPORTS OF UNIONS
Barbers had a good attendance at their last meeting, and everything is going along nicely. The Palace Barber Shop should go on record as the first local shop to patronize the Home Supply.

The Carmen reported a good meeting.

Laundryworkers' had a good meeting. Election of officers will be held at the next meeting, on June 22.

Trustees report that they have made some progress in the selection of a caretaker for the Labor Temple.

NEW BUSINESS
The election of a new president was laid over until the next meeting, when a larger attendance is expected.

The matter of naming a committee to distribute literature from the Union Label Trades Dept. was laid over until next week.

There was a general discussion

That sad, weebegone expression you usually see on the faces of professional humorists comes from seeing their stuff in cold print.

Midsummer's Opportune CLEARANCE SALE!

Offering Supreme "PRICE CUT" Values

To Clear Away "Thousands of Dollars" Worth of New Season's Merchandise

Of course there's a reason for this sale. We are known as the STYLE CENTER of Richmond, and why? WE MUST SELL, so as to make room for the thousands of dollars worth of the later season's merchandise.

Our business has grown until now it is the biggest in our history, and we believe the only reason is that everyone knows our policy of COMPLETE CLEARANCE, and knows at all times that anything purchased in this store is strictly up-to-the-minute in style and quality. We believe, honestly, that this is an opportunity to purchase correctly styled merchandise, and in the purchasing, to make real money for yourself.
